

Indian wine aficionados taste homegrown vintages at the 6th IWCCA

With an aim to give the Indian consumers an opportunity to judge for them, the leading Indian wines available in the country, IWCCA 2018, a brainchild of Nikhil Agarwal, Sommelier and CEO, All Things Nice, on January 13, 2017 at Sofitel BKC, Mumbai opened the doors for consumers to taste the new vintages and wines launched in the market.

According to an official release, 130 India wineries participated in the 6th edition of IWCCA. With no information about the price-point and the brand's name, the consumers tasted the wines blind to drive an unbiased judgment based on the quality of the wine. The winners of each category of the competition will be announced through the All Things Nice website.

The consumers at the IWCCA, tasted the wines from Lucaris' exquisite crystal stemware – Desire Universal Collection made from lead-free crystal glass composition known for strength and durability.
